

ART + AUCTION

DEPARTMENTS

CONVERSATION WITH...

59 1stdibs founder Michael Bruno discusses what's next for his online luxury-goods marketplace. BY BENJAMIN GENOCCHIO

THE REPORTER

61 Why are not-for-sale shows of museum-quality work by top-tier artists all the rage at London's galleries?

BROTHERS IN LAW

65 Though art can be valuable collateral, loans secured by artwork present a smorgasbord of risks. BY THOMAS AND CHARLES DANZIGER

SOUREN MELIKIAN

67 At the January Old Masters sales in New York, records were broken as tastes trended conservative.

IN THE STUDIO

76 Joris Laarman uses science and math—and the occasional hazmat suit—to create distinctive furniture. BY NICOLAI HARTVIG

MARKETFILE

ARTIST DOSSIER

103 Prices for the quirky yet graceful designs of "les Lalanne"—François-Xavier and Claude—have lately gone through the roof. BY MEREDITH MENDELSON

AUCTION REVIEWS

108 Impressionist and modern sales in London set records for Henry Moore and Joan Miró.

109 Contemporary sales bring satisfaction and optimism to London's major auction houses.

110 International sales results in brief from Beijing, Hong Kong, New York, and elsewhere.

DATABANK

114 In the past decade, fine-art prints have outperformed U.S. stocks and hedge funds. BY ROMAN KRAEUSCH

DEALER'S NOTEBOOK

120 From a humble start in the Paris flea market, François Laffanour has built a booming trade in furniture by 20th-century architects.

THIS PAGE: Lampara de Lagrimas, 2011, by Sebastian Errazuriz, is available at Cristina Grajales Gallery in New York for $28,000. See page 44 for other favorite chandeliers.